Gretchen

Graduate Spotlight

Daniel was having trouble finding quality work near his home and had a 60-mile commute to earn a paycheck. He found Digital Works through a local job fair and began his work-from-home career in July 2014. Recently, Daniel decided to look for an advanced position. With the help of a Digital Works placement specialist, he found a perfect fit.

“The Digital Works training has increased my marketability. As a senior citizen, that is important to me. I can look forward to many years of rewarding employment.”

Graduate Spotlight

A friend told Gretchen about Digital Works' work-from-home job opportunities because she was a stay-at-home mom looking for supplemental income for the family. With the help of Gallia County JFS, she joined the Digital Works program in April 2016. After just a few months working from home, Gretchen had the experience she needed to begin looking for advanced positions. In September, she began W2 employment with benefits and incentives working as a remote agent for U-Haul.

Freelancing in America: 2016

Fifty-five million Americans (35% of the national workforce) are now freelancing. This shift from the traditional nine-to-five job, also known as The Gig Economy, continues to grow.

Freelancers Union and Upwork have released its third annual comprehensive report about freelancing in the U.S., which analyzes the growing freelance economy and provides insights into the lives of independent workers, like many of our Digital Works graduates.
